

If the sea were to rise up
08/03/2008
Joel Akin

Psalm 104:26 There go the ships: there is that leviathan, whom thou hast made to play therein.

I think of Leviathan as Sin or sin but if the day of the Lord is to heal it is to create and create is when we finally have proof of the giant we call Leviathan.

Leviathan isn't Nessie though some will equate it with her and her family. It is a true nature of monster and like all creatures of the deep they dine upon the flesh of things like whales. If they get hungry they go after the people who live by the sea, though usually they do it in the dead of night. Then people say "It was a tsunami" and that becomes the myth of the small tsunami which wiped out an entire village in a night.

If that sounds foolish then think of a mountain which is trained by God. Then think of it rising up to be with God in the air for just a moment when the lay of the land is done. If the way is covered on all sides it would appear to be floating. Thus leviathan would greet the day with a smile for the smile is that of a true dragon. One which is bought and paid for by those who wish to capture its image in the sea below and the sky above.

If the one dragon left had a child it could lead to trouble but having only one means it isn't the call of God to the witness stand of two prophets in Israel. After all I had a theory that Time and Death stood side by side as each was a dragon of old. Both appeared as men and both were the cause of trouble to the human race.

Though it is a grand and wondrous theory it isn't the way of God who sees men want it to be of two things, the law and the prophets. For if the law rises up and sings it is the law of men which is the war of the fight and the war of time and the war of death and so on. Thus in a way the price of old is the price of the ships which go down to the sea.

They are ships that had to go down, as in days of old, to the deep before they could enter the day of the sea which sank in part. There was still the way of the open ocean but it had a place where it sank to the deep in a mighty roar. Thus the ship plummeted to the deep and gave up men to the sea willy nilly. They died and no one cared. Now the day of the Lord is fast approaching. Men will give up if they knew they were on the right path. If. Otherwise they would keep going and keep fighting so that means God will heal the way for us to rise.