

There are no people left in the sea
August 6, 2008
Joel Akin

1Kings 7:44 And one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea;

Of course we know the sea is of the altar and the altar is for sacrifice. The oxen are there to signify the point of contention with men and the burden they have to bear.

The point is that they are part of the story of the sea and the way life is meant to be lived. They are spiritual representations of law yet if we study the law we know that it is based on 10 and not 12 commandments. Yet if we study the way God works we know the future will be one where people are left out of the play of words for the sinner.

If that doesn't make sense think ahead to when we are free of sin. We are no longer sin but men and so the 12 oxen represent the labor and the sweat. If they bill it to the cow or the ox then it is they who bear up the offering of life to those who are yet to come. And it is meant to be of life. One where people go to the sea and live in freedom without the need for law to bear down on them.

Law will continue and it will be just as powerful for those who do wrong. Yet we who are alive and remain are trained in the right path. We do what is right by way of time and it is time which will make people submit.

No people in the sea? Of course we speak literally as of this moment that the sea is empty. Of course that sounds crazy for if you are on a boat in the middle of the sea reading this it makes no sense. However the will of God is to bill the price of the sea to those men who set them free. They are elf and dwarf and hobbit and life with sea of creatures all caught in a world below. They are people who have a way of life in them called Hope and Hope is the bill of freedom for the sigh of the heart.

The next sigh is when doors open. After all I am helping to prepare for the rapture. If there are others I haven't met them. I'm sure God will bring you in when the time is right.

The bill for the right to be free is caught up into the oxen under the sea. They are there to hold up the pan of water and it is there to guide men into the pay of will and freedom. When men come to you and ask "Why" the answer will be it is free to those who are of men. Man wants to be free. He wants to be set free. The will of man is to help but on their terms. If we go to the sea with men they will have to see that God moved out all the problems that were in it so that anything else isn't of time but of future.