

The last plea for life is almost gone
October 6, 2008
Joel Akin

Genesis 7:22 All in whose nostrils [was] the breath of life, of all that [was] in the dry [land], died.

It is a sad state of affairs when the last breath is gone and done with. If I, one man, fight to the end, then who among you even wants to have it? For if Noah fought to build an ark then who was there to help? We often preach no one but his son or sons and they were a help only in catching wild creatures. The fact is that all were in life because of God in grace. It was Noah who usually worked on the Ark and usually held it up and said "Is it almost..." and then finished it with a question "...done?"

We think the prior name for Noah was finish it and let it sit but God had other plans. He wanted to make it fit for living and living is when he knew it would bear up and out into a place which would be dark and dark meant no one, not even Noah, could bear it. For the world they left wasn't the world they fled to or even imagined. It was a world called world and from the earth they came over a hill and through a dale and up a rabbits hole in the world and its place below. Noah never came from the world we know but came to us by way of the land of middle earth.

Now you won't find the story in the scripture. God hid it and told those who wrote it to leave it out. He didn't say why but it was so the give of the game would be the clues that he left in scripture. The world. The earth. Both. Symbol and system.

One was the people of life. The other were the people of life in death. One came up and became the people of Ur only they began as people of er and er was the crossroad of the people of e and e were the people of r and r was the place of rest or the place we find in the word dream. Rem and also Ram or RAM. Of course it is a word not yet know to this time but it means the mind which dreams. It is the mind which is involved in the dream and the mind which carries up the dream. It is the mind which is built up of power and struggle and the mind which is capable of learning how to defend.

It is the mind which is able to defend against attack and cause the attacker to feel out of it simply for hitting you with too much thought. And this is why the breath is in those who were with Noah. He had a grip on the way of life and had a name of grace for the way he fought with those who were of death. They were people of life but in death and he never cursed them but held tight to the right side of faith.