Update on my life

Personal Narrations

Joel Akin

Calgary, Alberta

Lately the days are just flying by. The only way I can figure it out is because of my time with God. Remember Moses when he went up on the mountain with God? He spent so much time with God people thought he was dead. Maybe in some ways they think I'm gone too but when God heals me it will be cool to 'come back from the dead.' Last night I was reminded of the very first thing God taught me when I had these brain seizures in late Aug/Early Sept. He began to present His case to me of choosing between life and death. It was not as easy as one might think because it was during this period I really believed either the devil or God was trying to kill me. When everything shut down it was like being in this huge room filled with lights. Then one by one by one the lights went out. All of them. Until all you had was this indirect light that shone somewhere from above and it was the only thing you could cling to or see by. I don't want to go back to that place ever again.

That's why I'm thankful for what God has done. Though my health has not been that bad for weeks now I still deal with brain seizures daily and with not being able to speak though I can whisper some over the last week without major side effects later. I thought that was pretty cool.

One of the things I felt God say in the one dream is that I would be frozen in place and then suddenly there would be pressure from behind me to move forward. I've believed that included my web site on Underground homes. I've been getting some mail from people wanting me to fix links or add their site or give advice though it has slowed down considerably over the last 4 months. I also list earth sheltered homes for sale and people come specifically to see what is new. Today I got a major new listing from Arizona from a doctor. The problem is it takes time to put up each new listing. Sometimes an hour or more. I still don't know if I have the strength to do much about it though I will try. But maybe this is one of those signs that I'm to move forward? If so there should be a few other things that should happen this week. That would be cool cause God indicated at around the same time I would be free of being frozen which to me means my brain seizures will be healed.

I was thinking of my childhood friend David Rickaby. He has been into HO gauge railroading for much of his entire life. He has built an entire room in his basement with all kinds of scenes. We went to High School together and hung out a lot. We lived about 5 blocks apart so I was over his house a lot to listen to a new song he had written or to build model rockets, go camping, fishing, baseball and so on. In 1988 when I was in Michigan we spent an morning fishing and floating down this river and then an afternoon discovering towns I never heard of so he could take pictures of unusual trains. I ended up exploring and found a spooky looking house that was all boarded up and hidden on all sides by woods with no way in as the road had grown up as well. But all around the house no trees grew. I walked around and explored but its one of those places I probably could never find again if my life depended on it.
