The White Worm!

January 25, 2004

Personal Narrations

Joel Akin

Calgary, Alberta

A few days ago I had a gross dream where a large white worm came out of me. It jumped on another person, swallowed and crushed them in seconds. I did not write it down because I figured it was one of those bad dreams you don't want to remember. Last night God spoke to me about it and told me the worm represented worry and fear and that what I was able to deal with emotionally would crush someone else in seconds.

Who am I to disagree with God but I guess I don't see myself that way. I do know I've been praying for years to do away with fear and apparently that dream was the key dream which I did not recognize. I asked God if there was any specific person the fear latched onto. He told me no, that it represented every man.

I don't see myself as the courageous type but who knows how God sees us. This is actually a question God brought up with me. That He sees me differently than I see myself and though I do talk to Him I don't even really know who He is. And thus who I am through Him. I can understand what someone in pain said to me. When you are in the midst of suffering and pain its hard to recognize your position or authority in Christ.

And in fact its hard to think of anything when you are hurting but that pain. That is why I am so thankful I am able to talk with God even when there are still things to deal with in my life. God has let me know that there is much to do to prepare me. I would rather have His preparation than that of man. I do know if God sent me out now would I lack love? I am not talking about for just one person but crowds. Its hard for me to see beyond one or two people right now.
